Correctly speaking, if the rules enacted by the Boxing Commis-sion under the Frawley law were enforced the patrons of the sport would have little cause for complaint. If the law is retained it may be well for those called upon to enforce it to see that the following abuses are at once eliminated:

Gov. Whitman's objection that the men engased in the business of boxing are eager for the money is true, but as the same fault, if such it can be called, is shared by the men in baseball and every other professional sport under the sun and as some branches of amateur sport, notably football, are not entirely sport, notably football, are not entirely free from commercialism, it does not appear that the promoters of boxing should be blamed on that score.

If there are any defects in the way the present commission has administered the affairs of the business Gov. Whit-man has a remedy at hand, but it does not seem that he is justified in abolish-ing the entire boxing fabric because he is displeased with one feature of it.

Darcy-McCoy Title Bout.

In an effort to prove that Les Darcy and Ai McCoy if they meet in the ring at 160 pounds will not be boxing for the middleweight championship a contest this declaration:

"Ever since the Marquis of Queensberry rules supplanted the London prize ring code for the government of boxing in this country 158 pounds has been the limit. Dempsey and Fitzsimmons fought at 154 pounds ringside January 14, 1891, and of the emphasis that has been laid on pounds ringside January 14, 1891, and since that date every middleweight cham-pionship battle has been decided at 158 If the above assertion were based on fact it would be convincing and conclusive. Unfortunately for the dogmatic person, the facts and figures utterly dis-prove his assertion. For example, Fitz-be held at Mechanics Hall, Boston, on simmons, after winning the middleweight the evening of February 17. two billiard players in the case of Morningstar and Yamada it seems Maurice Daly and Leonard Howison will pounds. In fact, both men scaled more than 160. which is the European limit of the class and yet no one has ever denied that the bout was for the middleweight title.

Fitz's next important bout for the title was with Dan Creedon at New Orleans was with Dan Greedon at New Orleans September 25, 1894, and again both men scaled above the 160 mark. That was the last time that Fitz de-fended the middleweight title, for he got after Corbett and stuck to him till he Johnny Kilbane, after mature reflec-ion, gave utterance to this proclama-"My present intention is to enter the lightweight class; to beat Fred Weish for his title; then I will return to the feathers, and Chaney will be my first opponent—if the public wants it so." As Weish has been pretty generally barred by boxing associations it is not likely the pair could box anywhere except New Orleans. It is to be hoped that Kilbane and Weish will be matched to box seventy-five rounds at the Crescent City on condition it is to be their last battle.

Kid Lewis has developed into the most dangerous welter in the game. When Lewis first boxed in New York he did little except slap and run away. In recent bouts he has hit with trip hammer force and has shown remark

Britton appears to be a bit too crafty for the Kid as yet, but Lewis is the likeliest man for the welter crown now before the public.

When they went on strike they meant it, but as soon as the direct was over everything would be forgotten and forgiven. Why? Because when those fellows worked for you, they worked honestly. They sweat and toil and you get the last ounce of work that is in them. You never find a shirker among them. His fellows would not among them. His fellows would not permit it. Yet they take every possible chance, risking life and limb without a murmur."

In connection with this interview Shortstop might add that Fultz has re-peatedly in addresses to the players in printed literature attempted to convince the players of their duties to the club owners, and has attempted to point out that the strength of the organization depends on how well the players perform their duties. But there is no record of any player ever having been disciplined by the fraternity for disloyalty to his club or indifference. One of the great difficulties of Fultz's

Dear Tom: Looking over the 1917 sporting records, I found that Benny Leonard and many other fighters have not their correct record, as in the case of Benny Leonard, who was knocked out by Frankle Flemming and Young Joe Shugue. These two knockedus are not in Benny Leonard's record. I thought that the book should contain the full records. Kindly let me know your opinion on the same.

Mistakes are bound to creep in. We note Andrews Guide states Ed Smith refereed the Weish vs. White bout in Colorado Springs lust Labor Day. The "referee" was Billy Roach, who beat it away from the arena, pursued by angry fans. Leonard twice was knocked out by Flemming and once by Shugrue. Andrews Guide mentions k. o.'s by Flemming.
